Introduction

The BearingNet Company List allows you to find extra information about individual companies or to see all the companies in a specific country. The default setting for this page is an alphabetical list of all the companies who are members of BearingNet, sorted by name. To sort the list alphabetically by country click on ‘Sort by country’. To revert back to the list sorted by company name, click on ‘Sort by company’. You can use the letters in the ‘Jump to country/company’ box to find all the companies/countries beginning with that letter.

Companies can choose whether to display their recommendations on their company details page. See 'Your Recommendations' in the 'Your Account' user guide for more information. To give a trade recommendation to another company in BearingNet, find the company in the company list and then select 'Click here to recommend this company'. Companies which you have recommended will be highlighted in yellow on the search results page. To remove a recommendation from a company you have previously recommended, click on 'Your Account', select 'Your Recommendations' and use the delete feature in the 'Companies you are recommending' box.

Scores system explained

The scores system provides a more detailed account of how well regarded each company is and is based on the recommendations system.

- If a company recommends another, it is dependent on how many recommendations the recommending company already has as to how many points you will score from that recommendation.
- If you are recommended by a company who has never been recommended by any other companies you will score 1 point.
- If you are recommended by a company who has been recommended by other companies, you will receive 1 point for the direct recommendation and then another 0.5 points for every company that has already recommended the company that is recommending you. The idea behind this is that a recommendation from a well regarded company is worth more points than a recommendation from a company with few recommendations.
